Welcome to FedSpending.org

You have a right to know how the federal government spends its money.

This website, created by OMB Watch, is a free, searchable database of federal government spending. To begin searching, select either the Grants or Contracts tab at the top left side of this page. You can easily switch back and forth as you search.

The data below on total federal spending was taken directly from the FedSpending.org database. With over $12 trillion in federal spending, this more open and accessible tool for citizens to find out where federal money goes and who gets it is long overdue. We believe this website is a good first step toward providing that access.

*Note: FY 2005 only includes first three quarters of the year for all data except contracts (which is the full year). We will present data for the final quarter as soon as possible after it is released by the government.
